- President CHIANG Kai-shek's official family in Nanking consists of three unofficial advisers, eight official advisers and his so-called personal staff.
- CH'EN Kuo-fu (陳果夫), CH'EN Pu-lei (陳布雷) and CHANG Chun (張羣) are the unofficial advisers to President CHIANG Kai-shek and in Chinese government circles are usually referred to as the President's "Bag of Wisdom" (chih nang 知囊). CH'EN Kuo-fu attends to the investigation, examination and assignment of all Kuomintang members in the government. CH'EN Pu-lei advises the President on all national and international affairs of a confidential nature. CHANG Chun attempts to maintain harmonious relations among all Kuomintang members and between Kuomintang and non-Kuomintang members in the government. This was the purpose of his recent visits to General FU Tso-yi (傅作義) in Peiping, minor party leaders in Shanghai and LU Han (盧漢), Governor of Yunnan Province, in Kunming.
- The President's eight official advisers include three Kuomintang elders, two Democratic Socialist Party leaders, two Youth Party leaders, and one Non-Partisan Elder. They are:

WU Ching-heng (吳敬恆), Kuomintang Elder.
CHANG Ching-chiang (張靜江), Kuomintang Elder.
SHAO Li-tzu (邵力子), Kuomintang Leftist Elder.
CHANG Chun-mai (張君勱), Democratic Socialist Party Leader.
HSU Fu-lin (徐傅霖), Democratic Socialist Party Leader.
TSENG Ch'i (曾琦), Youth Party Leader.
YU Chia-chu (余家菊), Youth Party Leader.
MO Te-hui (莫德惠), Non-Partisan Group Elder.

- The President's so-called personal staff consists mostly of former members of the Generalissimo's office of the Aide-de-Camp (Shih Ts'ung shih 侍從室) which was dissolved in 1945. However, even after the dissolution of the office of the Aide-de-Camp, its important members continued to serve the Generalissimo in various capacities in the government. The secretary-general of the President's personal staff is WU Ting-ch'ang (吳鼎昌), under whom there are six bureaus and three offices. These bureaus and offices, with their chiefs and deputy-chiefs are as follows:
